The Raging River

Shrouded in darkness from the slate, smoke-like sky,
it roars through the valley letting out its battle cry.

Gathering its men from side streams and basins,
the foaming army marches onward as its pace hastens.

Children playing on bridges watch their sticks hurry away,
as regal herons assemble searching for prey.

Down the mountain it slaloms, skiing down at speed,
guzzling and swallowing what's in its sight with greed.

The rapids cascade on the rocks down below,
surging and crashing as the water flows.
The strong current sweeps away everything in sight,
clearing the pebbled path with all its might.

Rushing, spurting, shooting, leaping,
charging through the land, the water is creeping
on its journey, wild and free,
tumbling on its way towards the sea.
